I haven't been to Vegas for over 10 years and I like a bit of BlackJack. What are the small tables there now? $5 tables?

Also, where is a good online place to find out the rules and good guidelines to play BlackJack smartly? I don't want to loose all my money in one hand. 😊

I'm not sure if too many places on the Strip have anything less than $5 for a buy-in. But I do know for sure you can play for less at some of the places downtown, Fremont St, which is a blast!

You will need to look far and wide on the strip for any table games that are less than $10.00. DownTown area you will find 5.00 tables everywhere and it's a good time also.

There is a place next to the Ballys that has $3 tables and $5 tables

Google will yield you all the advice you need on BlackJack systems.

My only recommendation, would be to NOT play from Third base. This is the seat all the way to the left, the one that acts last after everyone and makes the decision just before the dealer does. You'll get blamed for everything, especially if you should have hit or not hit, and the dealer wins. It will be all your fault 😊

Of course if you cause the dealer to bust and make everyone win, you'll be the hero. But mostly you'll get chastised if you don't play "correctly" from that position.

Good luck !

Here's basic strategy chart - http://www.vegastripping.com/images/blackjack_basicstrategy.gif - Print it and take it with you.

I say we make Eric the ringer and make him split all the faces, double down on 12-19, and stand on 11 and below. That should make for a rowdy table

Dont forget to Hit on Ace and Face card (21). That should make for a good time.

oh yeah ! ... forgot to list that one, that is PURE double down play, you can't get much better of an 11 than that. Eric, write that one down in your play book 😊

I got your back for the brawl that will ensue, I promise 😊

We are going to have to setup an appointment for VMware blackjack. This discussion is needs to be played out on a table full of VMware World attendees.

Is it safe at those "downtown" casinos?

Where would the VMware blackjack take place? It seems like Shaun, Eric, and Scott are the type of blackjack pros that we'd need at the table. 😎

Yes, downtown (Freemont street) is very safe. Although it's a little far from the strip. I second the plan to take over a blackjack table and make it the VMware table. Maybe Eric can put it on the community calendar for us 😊

My primary job at the show is to tweet, so just ping me there, or follow us on the tweet stream - <http://www.twitter.com/delltechcenter> - and I'll blast out where we can play. I get there on Friday night (12th), I LOVE Vegas - would leave today if possible.

I was there last summer, and the only place on the strip I found with $5 blackjack was, believe it or not, the Bellagio. They had two $5 tables out of the hundreds of higher denomination tables (so you have to really look to find them). They're also quite busy, as you might suspect.

If I recall accurately, last summer Venetian had only $10 - $15 minimum blackjack tables. The limits tend to change however based on the time of day and day of the week. Evenings are typically higher limits than mornings & afternoons, and Weekends are typically higher limits than weekdays.

Hope this info is helpful!

Last time I was there the 5 dollar tables showed up in the morning...then they raised them to 10 in the evening. Im up for some Black Jack. If we can get good players we can rule the table. Lets put it this way I was down 150.00 at Wheeling Downs in WV at the craps table....and beleive me I love craps....no one knows how to roll the dice these days....anyways I pulled out and went to a black jack table and walked away 150.00 up. Anyone out there good a rolling dice...craps is where the money is at. Craps has the best vegas odds for the player.

👤 in response to: Ted Spero playing blackjack on a casino is quite diferent from playing it online, theres a game called VIP.Casino thats a killer for getting the flow of the game, i started playing blackjack with the game with my kids and latter migrated to using the HP Touchsmart with a couple of friend for a match, using as online casino Heracasino.com, we used to get together everybody paid me and i keep the counts to count for the winnings and so and so, so when we desided to go Vegas las year we decided to stay at Wynn and the experience was as if we where home, the only diference was that we could not get readable strategy charts from the casino, is there a place on veras that we could get them ?
