

VMworld 2008 - Poker Players !

Scott Hanson 33 posts since

Sep 10, 2007

The BlackJack thread was good , but I'm interested to see who wants to play a REAL game. I'm planning on playing a ton of poker this weekend. I'm actually headed out on Friday. I plan on playing the Noon and 8pm tournaments on Saturday and Sunday at the Venetian.

The noon on Saturday is the bigger one for $550 entry fee. Anybody played in these before ? How many players typically enter ?

I'll also play a bunch of $2/5 NL and maybe some $5/10 NL if the game is right.

Where is good to play ? Who else has plans to play poker ?

BJ Selman 4 posts since

Aug 19, 2008 1. Re: VMworld 2008 - Poker Players ! Sep 10, 2008 12:42 PM

i get there sunday 8am and plan on playing some poker. i've never been to vega's and was also wondering where the best place is to play (to avoid the locals and regulars who will take all my $$).

Scott Hanson 33 posts since

Sep 10, 2007 2. Re: VMworld 2008 - Poker Players ! Sep 10, 2008 2:10 PM

↑ in response to: BJ Selman

If you stick to the $1/2 NL tables, you won't have to worry much about the Vegas "locals" taking your money. The action at the MGM is always good, but it's pretty far from the Venetian. The Wynn has a great room and the low limit NL games there are always good.

VMworld 2008 - Poker Players !

They allow you to buy in for as much as you want. Some poker rooms limit the buyin to $100 or $200, but not at the Wynn.

The Venetian is a very comfortable room, but you'll find a better class of player trying to take your money (local pros).

Harrahs is also close - last time I played there they only allowed short buys and the half the table had no idea how to play poker. Crazy action.

You'll basically have fun at any $1/2 NL table. If you're not and people are not laughing and chatting and having a good time, then just find another table. That's what I do, life is too short.