If you're looking for the vmworld US 2011 rendition of this event please follow this link.

Get Ready.

For the last few years, a small, unofficial crew has been organizing a small event to meet up, have a few drinks, socialize, network, and generally get psyched up for vmworld the night before it all gets started.

This will be the fourth year we've organized this event, the second year we've looked for sponsorship help, and the first year we're going to claim we have any idea what we're doing.

Sponsors are lined up. Location is booked. Check the vmunderground website for more details!

Thanks,

-Theron

NICE Theron! Since this is my 1st VMware World, I will most certainly be there. I assume the URL you provided above is where you'll post the most up-to-date info on the "soïree"??

Thanks!

I am also a small shop, and have looked for a way to network with others. How can I get added to the invite list?

Theron:

If I wear my virtually sober t-shirt from Vegas VMworld would you buy a fellow DSM'r a drink?

Did you leave MMC?

Theron, sent ya an email.

I'd also love to get in on the Sunday Night meet. This is my first VMworld and I'm looking to network as much as possible to make it a great event!

Will there be some registration or sign-up, or just 'show up'?

Thanks.

Hey Theron,

I was on the vmunderworld website a few minutes ago. I see the Registration button for the 2nd and final batch of "ticket" for the party, but I cannot register. The quantity is stuck on zero and the registration button wants a number higher than zero. do you have any other advice on registering?

thanks!

you mean the eventbrite site? if the ticket count is sitting at zero, I believe that means there are no additional tickets available at this time. If there are more tickets that will be issued, @vseanclark will update everyone via the regular channels. You can also get information via the vmunderground.com website.

Thanks!

All the tickets have been issued, but it still may be worth your while to swing by. If there's space available, we'll be letting folks in.

Not going to VMworld this year, but maybe I should fly out anyway to party with the "underground" crew. I'll have to register the party suite again 😊

Have fun fellas!
